The weather will not change much on Whit Monday, so the sun should not be missed during the day. Later in the day, the risk of isolated, partly thundery showers will increase slightly. Additionally, the temperatures will be pleasant. On Tuesday, the influence of low pressure will strengthen. The clouds will become more and thicker, and rain showers will spread. Even isolated thunderstorms are possible, and the temperatures will drop slightly again. Wednesday will continue to be unsettled, and showers will be common. However, the weather will gradually calm down. In the second half of the week, the sun will appear occasionally, but the weather will not remain stable for long. The air mass will remain unstable, so showers or thunderstorms are possible, especially in the afternoons and evenings, particularly over the mountains.
