today, Wednesday 06.12.2023

Cold early winter weather is expected until Thursday, then persistently milder air masses will establish themselves. This change in air masses is accompanied by a consistently variable weather pattern, whereby also sunny and stable weather phases are expected. On Wednesday, winter will affect the conditions once again. Despite strong, partially clearing clouds, isolated snow showers are expected, and temperatures will remain mostly frosty during the day. Thursday will bring a significant improvement with bright sunshine, followed by a few clouds towards the evening. These clouds will indicate milder air, which will fully prevail on Friday. With a light foehn-like southerly wind, there will be a mix of sun and clouds, and light precipitation may fall towards the evening. A weak disturbance will brush against our area and largely dissipate by Saturday. However, temperatures may decrease again, so a more significant thaw is not expected for the time being. Also Sunday promises only slightly changeable conditions.
