The heat wave will further increase just in time for the dog days. In Europe the hot days from 23 July until 23 Auguste are colloquially called dog days. A large high-pressure area called YVONNE is responsible for the bright midsummer weather. The peak of this heat wave is expected around midweek (Wednesday) respectively on Thursday. Afterwards the extremely hot temperatures will slightly decrease, however, temperatures around 30 degrees in the lowlands will still not bring a cooling. The risk for thunderstorms will increase not before the weekend. According to the latest weather models an end of the period of midsummer weather seems likely.
