The weather in Serfaus-Fiss-Ladis

Weather summary

A powerful high-pressure system centered over the North Atlantic is now expanding further in our direction, bringing beautiful and very stable spring weather from Wednesday through the weekend. Wednesday will start with some residual high-level fog in certain valleys, but bright sunshine will prevail from the mountains outwards, and the clouds will dissipate. After that, we'll mostly see clear skies. Occasional patches of harmless clouds will hardly disturb the pristine blue sky. Temperatures will rise significantly starting midweek, with the frost line already approaching the 3,000-meter mark again. It will remain quite cool only during the morning hours.
